I don't want to be the "genius" who now "understands" that so many people failed to realize their desires because of "One, two, three, Bang — the key, which happens to be right here in my pocket." I now know that the political strategists who "understand" why so many people didn't realize their variegated; contradictory and unpredictable desires, in reality understand nothing except their own miserable desire to "lead."

Peter Shumlin of Vermont, in a State of the State address devoted to what he called a "heroin crisis," urged the state to address addiction "as a public health crisis, providing treatment and support, rather than simply doling out punishment, claiming victory and moving onto our next conviction." Public officials throughout rural America, even law-and-order types, have echoed these sentiments.
